In addition to the well known social issues of illiteracy and innumeracy, there also should be such a concept as "immappancy", meaning insufficient geographical knowledge.

A survey with random American schoolkids let them guess the population and land area of their country. Not entirely unexpected, but still rather unsettling, the majority chose "1-2 billion" and "largest in the world", respectively.

Even with Asian and European college students, geographical estimates were often off by factors of 2-3. This is partly due to the highly distorted nature of the predominantly used mapping projections (such as Mercator).

A particularly extreme example is the worldwide misjudgement of the true size of Africa. This single image tries to embody the massive scale, which is larger than the USA, China, India, Japan and all of Europe..... combined!

Modern Matriarchal Studies

HGA (& CK) key principles:

- Concrete rather than abstract in world;
- Not mother rule but non-hierarchical;
- Consensus (unanimity) – system of councils – grassroots – consultative, participatory – democratic;
- Distribution (sharing) vs accumulation (hoarding);
- Meeting needs vs power over;
- Motherly or matriarchal men;
- Humane society;
- Radically oriented towards life (not war industry);
- Political action always spiritual in matriarchy (vs detachment in patriarchy);
- All connected: science, politics, spirituality, all ad infinitum

Matrilineal / Matriarchal societies include:

Angola, Botswana, Burkina Faso, Ghana, Malawi, Namibia, South Africa, Zambia and the country known as North Africa (Makilam)

Ifi Amadiume - Matriarchitarianism

Necessity for feminist indigenous scholarship to be interdisciplinary and intersectional, including spirituality, and even prophecy.

She reclaims "the concept of the traditional in Africa to mean precolonial African cultures" that are not static or delineated by rigid time breaks. This reclaimed traditional is dynamic: past, present, and perhaps even future.

"When we look at women's contributions and approaches to development in Africa, we see that generally women are guided by teachings deriving from what I would call a "relational matriarchal principle" that sees us all as human beings and children of one mother, umunne. I believe this to be a general and basic African ethic of kinship. It can further be a non-racist and non-patriarchal basis for an alternative global citizenship in the struggle for human rights, social justice and an inclusive development."

"matriarchy is that the matri-centric unit is the smallest kinship unit. Its material basis is concrete and empirical, while the material and ideological basis of patriarchy embodies a contradiction. Patriarchy is disputable since fatherhood is a social construct.

(HGA Modern Matriarchal Studies)

"matriarchitarianism" to capture a women-generated inclusive culture in the indigenous social structure as a movement - rematriating activism back to our centre, our core, our (African) calabash (European chalice)

Amadiume speaks of "collective kinship", like the pan-African concept of ubuntu.

She speaks with poetry. And with love.

It is this collective kinship and love, compassion, gifting, trust and respect, on which indigenous and KhoeSan values are based, which grounds our structures as egalitarian and nonviolent.

This then is the Praxis, rather than the Theory, of Everything, of Love, KhoeSan-style.

San Healer Meneputo Manunga in Kalahari (6 countries)

Ma-Meneputo:

"The San people found power in the light of the moon. The ancients made a queen and hoisted her up into the sky where she became the moon. The people danced in the light of the moon. This is where we found our healing power."

"I have told you some things that my hands made me remember... In the early days, the San people's hands were always busy. It was not like today, when the people have nothing to do... If you do not have money or you do not have a veld (field) in which to find food, you have nothing. You are a person without breath while you are alive."
